

AbstractEncoder

- 5 A motion encoder for use with a rotating key. The motion encoder allows the direction of rotation to be determined by providing elements having different characteristics for the transmission of a IR beam. These elements are arranged in a pattern that allows an IR beam impinging on the elements to trace a path detected as the rotating key turns. The beam being detected after
- 10 changes in the reflected or transmitted beam indicating the direction of rotation of the beam.